

Washington, D. C., Feb., 1904.
After making a short speech from the rear end of the truin to the crowd of Alexandrians, who kindly showed us the way to go home, after we had called on Louis Bull and Chief Petiti, we sunk into our seat in the purior car, and simply sped to the seat of government.

We passed old St. Asaph's and we heard a man tell another something about "chips" as we stopped at Jackson City and let sonie fellows off, with hig black mustaches and checkerboard pants and box overcoats.

The first thing we saw was the big monument and the next thing we remember was a fellow at the depot, who took our grip and told us he would take us to the best hotel in the place or refund our money.

to the best hotel in the place or refund our money.

If you wish to see Washington in the right way, it costs something.

A fellow generally lands at the best hotel, alia in two weeks, he finds himself one of the boys in the discent ledging houses, among the politician who came to town in 1855 to get political plums, and who are still looking for them.

We never hope to be a politician, but some day our friends may find that they can do no better than send us to Congress.

can do no petter than gress. We'd like to go to Congress, so we could take advantage of the books in the pretty new Library building, and go up to the While House grounds every Easter, and buy bananas at Seventh and the Avenue for five cents per dozen, and see Jim Lawrance once in a while, and tell him how the Man About Town clears are going.

are going.

Thanks to John Doyle, who fixed us up on an emergency, to come on this trip; ore getting our good health back, and taking a daily nap in the gallery of the Senate.

Our principal reason for being here is to study the international situation, and find out what the President is going to do about Japan and Russia.

And we hope in a few days to let our friends know the real insidewardness of the whole business.

Mr. Richard Le Gallienne had an arti-cle in "Success" the other day called "What's the Use of Poetry?" That's what we call an impertment

Some people don't think there is any use of poetry. They'd rather read some of Nick Carter's stories or Rudyard Kipling's stuff, than to wade through Longfellow or Byron or Tennyson.

Other people think poetry is a good thing to paste in a scrap book and to copy to send to their sweethearts.

As far us, we think there are lots of good things in poetry-like dessert after a Welsh rarebit. Taken, for instance, this one:

"Don't you leave me in de rain; Don't you leave me in de snow; Don't leave me wid my shoes hanging Don't I stand a little show?

"Oh! won't you kindly hum old "Home, Sweet Home," to me? I never, never dreamed dat dis would ever be; You know what Mrs. Bailey done, don't do de same to me, And I will ask forgiveness on my bended knew."

There is lots of sentiment in that peem. It expresses a whole lot, and we feel sorry for the fellow who expects to have his shoes hanging out, especially in such weather as this.

And then this one:

"You've all heard of Dooley, a man of great name. Is Dooley's young daughter, Miss Kit-

Just think of it. All the fame that has come to Dooley has not been merited. But we feel sorry for Miss Kitty, if she is forced, hereafter, to carry the burdens that Dooley has contracted. Then Mr. Harry Morris, the voluminous poet, contributes this:

"When children are as good as they can

They ain't afraid of Hickey Dee; He's got a big mag and he puts them in, And he never let's them out again.

"What's that man's name? Hinkey Dee! Look out for him, he can't catch me; is a great big bag, you bet we know, When we see him coming, away we go

We have heard of Hinkey Dee, and we know of six barefooted boys who are afraid of him, showing the great use to which poetry may be put?

We think there is a lot of use for poetry. Here is one from the famous bound volume of Man About Town stories, printed by Mr. Clyde Saunders, which we think is most touching: 'Two tramps were out on the road one day; Where old Parmer Corncel was making hay;

may;
"Say, Pete, why is it that year by year.
"The people say we lead a checkered career?"

"Well, the only thing that I can prove Is the fact that we are always on the move."
